

Voluntary Relocation Outside Canada

Relocation means that you will be living in a country other than Canada, either permanently or temporarily. Your benefits will be affected if you decide to move. This applies to injured workers, their dependent spouse and children. You must tell us if you are planning to move outside Canada.

Moving can affect how much you get for your benefits and how you are paid

You can expect that:

- Benefits and expenses will be paid only in Canadian funds.
- Medical expenses will be paid at Saskatchewan rates.
- If you get benefits for loss of earnings, we may review what you are able to earn when you move. We will check this every year on your anniversary date.
- If you need medical treatment or vocational training, you must have a plan before you move.
- Benefits can be held or stopped when you move if medical or treatment plans are stopped or delayed.
- After you move, you will be responsible for arranging and paying for any translation of medical or other reports that we may need.
- Travel expenses will be calculated and paid for as if you still lived in Saskatchewan.
- We will require yearly proof of where you live and if you are able to work.

If you have any questions about our policy on relocating please contact our office.
